Germans Admit Flood Cuts Down Speed; Mines Hurlled Into Channel Waters

LONDON, June 3—Attacking German forces now are only three miles from Dunkerque Beach, latest members of the rescued British Expeditionary Force disclosed on their arrival in London today.

"The French are fighting like mad and putting up a magnificent battle," the soldiers said.

French offensives against the Germans are frequent, they said.

BERLIN, June 3—A retreat by Allied forces along the Maginot Line near Forbach was reported today in the official communiqué of the German high command which asserted that 330,000 French and British troops have been taken prisoner in the Battle of Flanders thus far.

The statement said: "The attack on Dunkerque from the West, South and East is making slow progress. Flooded ground in great stretches is hampering our operations."

"Nevertheless, with the cooperation of our air force, we succeeded in penetrating the strongly fortified town of Bergues."

"The sector around Dunkerque which is still in the hands of the enemy is continuously kept under heavy artillery fire."

More Vessels Hit

"Fighting and diving bombers continued their attacks on Dunkerque also on June 2. In the course of these attacks, two destroyers, one guard vessel and one 5,000-ton merchantman were sunk, and one warship, two destroyers and 10 merchantmen were damaged by bomb hits."

"Attacks by the air force were extended as far as the Rhone River Valley and Marseilles."

"The enemy retreated on the Maginot Line before our troops pushing forward on either side of Forbach. The enemy left prisoners, arms and other material in our hands."

"The number of British and French prisoners captured in the course of a great battle in Flanders and Artois has, according to provisional calculations, now mounted to 330,000."

PARIS, June 3—Supported by almost incessant naval artillery barrages and Royal Air Force fighters and bombers, the rear guard defenders of the French channel port of Dunkerque today kept on defending the city's fortified zone against massed German attackers.

Object of the Allied troops was to prevent the Germans from storming through a narrow, unflooded gap and to cover embankment operations which continued on Page Two

British Stand Ready For Any Development in War

LONDON, June 3—Prepared for every eventuality from Italian participation in the war to a direct invasion of England, the British government took over complete control of this country's civilian life today.

Military and police authorities established a virtual cordon around London. Guards were mounted at every junction and point of entry into the so-called "arterial roads" which link the capital with the provinces.

The guards were ruthless in their examinations of identity cards and driving licenses. The scrutiny was so thorough and comprehensive that ordinary traffic was completely dislocated. In some cases, trunk roads were jammed with waiting cars four miles deep.

Haze Prevents Residents From Watching Combat; Scores Of Missiles Dropped; Extent Of Damage Not Determined

CITIZENS AMAZED, ANGERED BY RAID

Ambulances And First Aid Cars Speed To Assigned Places; Alarm Sounds For 70 Minutes; Explosions Heard

BERLIN, June 3—German planes today bombed French air force bases in the vicinity of Paris, including the military airport at Issy-Les-Moulineaux, it was officially reported in Berlin tonight.

By Kenneth Downs

PARIS, June 3—Inflicting a known death toll of 35, including one American, German war planes raided Paris this afternoon—nine months to the day from the outbreak of war.

Military censorship prevents the naming of actual localities hit by the bombs which rained on the capital and its outskirts, but reports from eye-witnesses indicated that at least one apartment building was struck and that missiles had fallen near the Bois De Boulogne and the Champs Elysees.

At least half a dozen fires were started on the outskirts, throwing up dense columns of smoke to the sky.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: A Reuter (British) news agency dispatch reported that several private residences were hit. The figure of 35 dead was given out by the French Ministry of Information, which did not disclose the American's identity.)

The air raid alarm sounded at 7:20 a. m. (Circleville time), and within five minutes the skies were filled with the roar of planes.

Although the skies were cloudless, a haze hid the attackers from view.

With anti-aircraft guns sounding in all directions from the ring of emplacements surrounding the capital, a heavy thud of bombs continued without interruption.

At that time, the attack tapered off to occasional explosions, but already half a dozen columns of smoke could be seen billowing towards the sky on the outskirts of the city.

This correspondent was at the United States embassy with First Secretary Maynard Barnes when the long-expected attack came.

We rushed to the roof of the building to watch the attack as French fighter-planes went aloft, losing themselves in the haze along with the attackers.

The raiders as well as defense planes remained clouded from view throughout the attack, but the air was filled with the indescribable din of roaring motors, punctuated by the explosions of anti-aircraft guns.

Paris Amazed

Paris greeted the first real attack with stunned amazement.

The first blast of the warning sirens sent thousands of Parisians to cover while the streets were filled with racing ambulances and first-aid trucks, all rushing for their appointed places.

There was no immediate estimate of the damage done or threatened, or no indication that Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's visitation of "guerre totale" on the capital of France had exacted casualties.

As clouds of smoke began to rise one after another on the outskirts, it became easily apparent that German incendiary bombs were taking their toll.

Paris has had numerous air raid alarms in recent months and on May 21 a few bombs were dropped in the Seine-Et-Oise district near Versailles. But it was not until today—nine months after Britain and France declared a state of war existed as a result of Hitler's invasion of Poland—that Paris (Continued on Page Two)

Under new precautionary regulations which went into effect today, all aliens are compelled to be in their homes by midnight. Special permits are being issued in certain cases, but this procedure is exceedingly slow, with the result that the curfew will be virtually air-tight tonight.

Many Americans remaining in London compared themselves to cinderellas—compelled to be at home behind locked doors and darkened windows when Big Ben strikes midnight.

Axis Action Expected
Well-informed circles were entirely convinced that the coming week will bring intensification of the war and possibly some joint strategy by the Rome-Berlin axis.

Some quarters predicted quick renewal of Germany's drive against the heart of France, with Italy throwing in her lot with the Reich.

But there also was a widely held opinion that Germany needs a breathing spell before launching a westward assault and that Premier Mussolini is not quite ready to strike.

This second opinion forecast axis diplomatic moves as a prelude to renewed military action.

Meanwhile, the Allied general staff gave every sign of awareness of the situation, as displayed by further reinforcement of the Allied Mediterranean fleet and diversion of considerable other forces to that area.

Meanwhile, evacuation of Allied troops from the French channel port of Dunkerque continued, although this has now dwindled to a trickle as compared with the flood of men reaching England during the last few days.

ris itself shook from the thud of falling bombs.

The immense explosive power of the German weapons was attested by the fact that buildings shook and window-panes rattled unceasingly as the bombs fell outside the city. The immediate assumption was that the Nazi planes were attacking military objectives such as railway junctions, factories and munitions stores, but in the intense confusion it was impossible to obtain details.

Due to the haze in the sky, Parisians had to rely on their sense of hearing rather than sight to appreciate the extent of the raid. Those who were present during this long-ferred assault agreed that the skies were literally "filled" with squadrons of attackers, if the noise they made was any criterion.

Raid Lasts 70 Minutes

The alarm ended one hour and ten minutes after it sounded.

Until the "all clear" came, all dispatches and telephone calls were held up.

For the present, we are forbidden to give any indication of the locality of the hits.

Throughout the raid, the stunned populace of Paris remained calm. The general reaction was one of grim fury.

He also proposed that President Roosevelt create a Council for Home Defense, to coordinate the anti-subversive activities of the F.B.I., secret service, army and navy intelligence, and the committee.

A large number of senators meanwhile expressed approval of the latest move of the Federal Bureau of Investigation against "fifth column" and alien activities—creation of a "national defense investigation" unit within the bureau.

British Stand Ready For Any Developments in War

British Expeditionary Force have arrived in England from Flanders.)

The increasing intensity of the German assault upon Dunkerque from land and air is evident from the sounds heard in England from the other side of the channel throughout the night.

It was reported that the French citadel at Calais is still holding out and was increasingly evident that the action there is going to rank with Alcazar among the stories of the world's great sieges.

A precaution to confuse possible German parachute troops left Britain without highway signposts over the week end, and as a result thousands of hikers and motorists lost their way on country rambles. In addition, long lines of motorists were held up at strategic road points as police and military officials methodically examined their identity cards.

London rapidly assumed the appearance of a fortified zone with important buildings surrounded by miles of barbed wire and by sand-bagged machine-gun posts.

Another indication of the country's determination to make the work of parachutists and "fifth columnists" difficult, it was even suggested that route indicators be removed from England's multitudes of buses.

Amid signs of approaching Italian intervention in the war, it was learned that Britain, through diplomatic channels, may make a final plea to Premier Mussolini to stay out of the conflict on grounds that "there are no Anglo-Italian differences requiring armed force for a solution."

Nevertheless, it was made clear that the Allies are taking "necessary steps" in the Mediterranean in the event Mussolini decides to make the plunge.

A well-informed source stated: "If the Italian government should now decide to choose the path of war, the responsibility is theirs alone. Britain will know how to meet the attack."

"Persecutions" Charged
(The Rome radio broadcast an announcement that the life of Italian residents of French Morocco is becoming "intolerable" owing to "unjustified persecutions" by the French.)

(The London Daily Telegraph reported that Chancellor Hitler has assured Mussolini that, when the time is ripe for Italian intervention, Germany can engineer overthrow of the Franco regime in Spain, resulting in active Spanish participation in the war.)

A Reuters dispatch from Madrid, however, said Italy's entry into the war would not change Spain's position as a non-belligerent.)

A British spokesman said Britain and France have made it clear to Italy that they are "only too willing to discuss and meet all legitimate Italian aspirations."

"Unfortunately," he said, "the Italian government has never been willing to enter conversations on this subject."

"The British and French are determined to resist German aspirations for world domination, which, if realized, would reduce Britain, France and Italy alike to the status of vassal states of Germany. But between Britain and Italy there are no differences which cannot be settled."

ris itself shook from the thud of falling bombs.

The immense explosive power of the German weapons was attested by the fact that buildings shook and window-panes rattled unceasingly as the bombs fell outside the city. The immediate assumption was that the Nazi planes were attacking military objectives such as railway junctions, factories and munitions stores, but in the intense confusion it was impossible to obtain details.

Due to the haze in the sky, Parisians had to rely on their sense of hearing rather than sight to appreciate the extent of the raid. Those who were present during this long-expected assault agreed that the skies were literally "filled" with squadrons of attackers, if the noise they made was any criterion.

Raid Lasts 70 Minutes
The alarm ended one hour and ten minutes after it sounded.

British Stand Ready For Any Developments in War

British Expeditionary Force have arrived in England from Flanders.)

The increasing intensity of the German assault upon Dunkerque from land and air is evident from the sounds heard in England from the other side of the channel throughout the night.

It was reported that the French citadel at Calais is still holding out and was increasingly evident that the action there is going to rank with Alcazar among the stories of the world's great sieges.

A precaution to confuse possible German parachute troops left Britain without highway signposts over the week end, and as a result thousands of hikers and motorists lost their way on country rambles. In addition, long lines of motorists were held up at strategic road points as police and military officials methodically examined their identity cards.

London rapidly assumed the appearance of a fortified zone with important buildings surrounded by miles of barbed wire and by sand-bagged machine-gun posts.

Another indication of the country's determination to make the work of parachutists and "fifth columnists" difficult, it was even suggested that route indicators be removed from England's multitude of buses.

Amid signs of approaching Italian intervention in the war, it was learned that Britain, through diplomatic channels, may make a final plea to Premier Mussolini to stay out of the conflict on grounds that "there are no Anglo-Italian differences requiring armed force for a solution."

Nevertheless, it was made clear that the Allies are taking "necessary steps" in the Mediterranean in the event Mussolini decides to make the plunge.

A well-informed source stated: "If the Italian government should now decide to choose the path of war, the responsibility is theirs alone. Britain will know how to meet the attack."

"Persecutions" Charged
(The Rome radio broadcast an announcement that the life of Italian residents of French Morocco is becoming "intolerable" owing to "unjustified persecutions" by the French.)

(The London Daily Telegraph reported that Chancellor Hitler has assured Mussolini that, when the time is ripe for Italian intervention, Germany can engineer overthrow of the Franco regime in Spain, resulting in active Spanish participation in the war.)

A Reuters dispatch from Madrid, however, said Italy's entry into the war would not change Spain's position as a non-belligerent.)

A British spokesman said Britain and France have made it clear to Italy that they are "only too willing to discuss and meet all legitimate Italian aspirations."

"Unfortunately," he said, "the Italian government has never been willing to enter conversations on this subject."

"The British and French are determined to resist German aspirations for world domination, which, if realized, would reduce Britain, France and Italy alike to the status of vassal states of Germany. But between Britain and Italy there are no differences which cannot be settled."

Defender Says One American Craft Now Worth 10 Six Weeks From Now

By H. R. Knickerbocker
With the French Army at the Battle Front, June 3—We stood today on a "Place of the Infantry" and read this inscription:
"Of the 306th Regiment, 1,150 were killed, wounded or disappeared in one day at this place."

It was a French village emptied of its residents by the war and we were surrounded by soldiers, while overhead prowled German airplanes and not far off sounded the "whish" of hurrying shells.
But the date of the inscription was 1914.

"You see," said a French major, "the war today isn't the worst. Think of 1,150 casualties in one regiment in 24 hours."

This trip has taken us along about one-half of all the river defenses of France against which the Germans will have to hurl their Panzer (mechanized) divisions, dive their bombers, hail their shells and finally try to fling their bodies in a possible attempt to break through to Paris.

Nobody can deny that the Germans have won successes, but it is necessary to come here to the front to realize how costly they have been and that if the French could only get the essentially necessary planes and tanks, and if they can hold out until it is possible to get them, Chancellor Hitler's gigantic gamble of the destiny of Germany, Europe and the world on one vast battle may lose.

Half Million Casualties
According to a semi-official French estimate, from the beginning of the "battle of all time" on May 10 until the end of May the Germans lost 100,000 dead and 400,000 wounded, making the gigantic total of 500,000 casualties in 20 days.

Of their several thousand tanks, it is claimed, the Germans have lost 2,000. Another source said they have lost a large percentage of both their tanks and airplanes. It must be remembered, however, that the Germans have been advancing and that many disabled tanks may be repaired.

So far this has been a war in which success has been won by superior quantities of tanks and airplanes. German superiority in these arms will continue, it is stated, until and unless the Allies receive contributions from "outside"—meaning the United States.

The next two or three weeks may determine whether the Germans, with their vastly heavier masses of planes and tanks can crush the French to such an extent that any American assistance proffered later would be futile. One high French officer said to me today:

"One American airplane sent now would be worth ten sent in six weeks or 100 in six months." These and similar arguments were heard today as we went from regiment to regiment.

378,769 TRAVEL TO WORLD FAIR DURING WEEKEND

NEW YORK, June 3—A new 1940 attendance record of 378,769 yesterday was announced by the New York World's Fair today. An estimated 12,000 members of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, the presence of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and a warm June sun combined to smash the previous three-day old record.

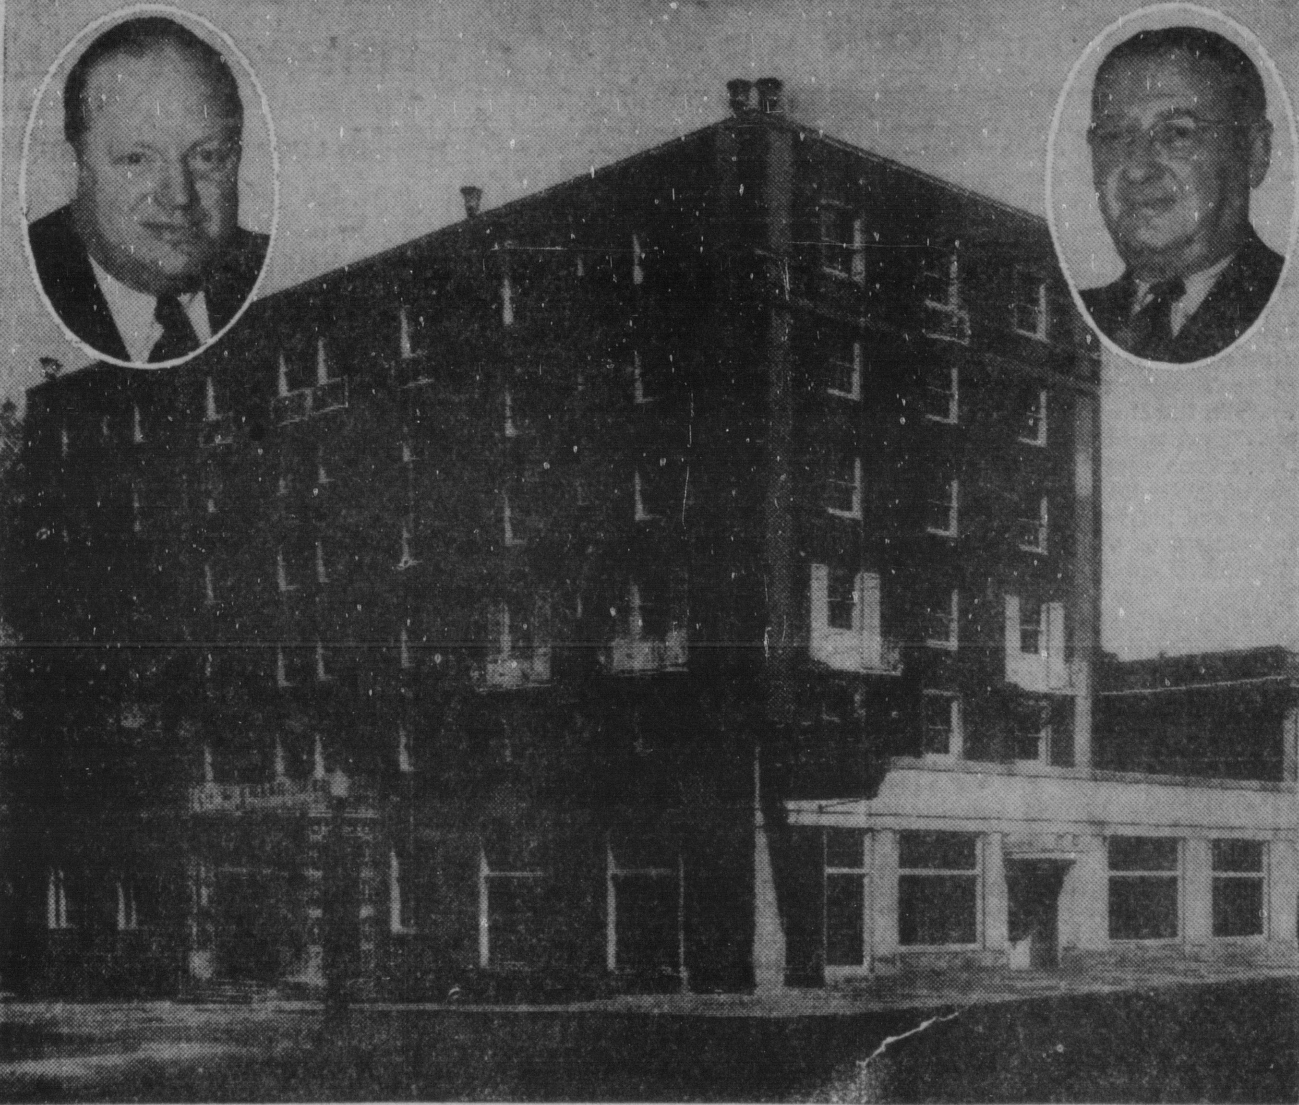

MECHANIZED UNITS TURN TIDE OF MOCK BATTLE

COLUMBUS, June 3—Blitzkrieg tactics by two of the army's newest mechanized combat units were credited today with saving the "Blue" forces and enabling them to win a mock major battle staged by Ohio National Guard and reserve officers around New Albany, north of Columbus.

The combat units, commanded by Ohio Adj. Gen. Gilson D. Light, commander of the 37th division, counter-attacked when the attacking force of five enemy "Red" divisions was breaking through the defensive lines. The "Reds" were repelled.

The Red forces began their attack near Urbana, while the defending blue forces launched operations near Newark and New Granville. Two hundred National Guard officers and 100 reserve officers, together with 350 enlisted men, took part in the two-day combat exercises, in which 100,000 "paper" troops were simulated.

CIO SHOWDOWN

Behind the closed doors of the CIO executive committee convening today (Monday), there will be a showdown which may have far-reaching effect on the future of labor.

Not generally known is the fact that the inner CIO command has been racked by a serious factional split for months.

Heart of the conflict is the question of who shall dominate CIO policy; whether the CIO shall be Communists and fellow-travelers in key positions, or by the moderate trade-union majority. Involved in the struggle is the continued rule of John L. Lewis. Also involved are peace with the AFL, and the CIO's stand on the third term.

Backing John L. Lewis are a number of small, left-wing unions. They are adamantly opposed to peace with the AFL and to Roosevelt. They also eye the national defense program with hostile suspicion and denounce the European war as an "imperialistic struggle."

Opposing this radical coterie are the big CIO affiliates that constitute its real numerical strength—United Rubber Workers, United Auto Workers, and Amalgamated Clothing Workers. Led by brainy Sidney Hillman of the Clothing Workers, recently appointed to the National Defense Council, this faction is pro-third term, pro-Ally, anti-Communist, for peace with the AFL; and in recent weeks, for the elimination of Lewis as CIO president.

When Lewis called today's executive committee meeting, he gave no indication of what would be considered. But the inside word reaching the Hillman group is that Lewis wants to put the committee on record in favor of his anti-third term and anti-AFL stand; also to issue a covertly anti-administration blast on the defense and war issues.

If he attempts to jam these through, it is not impossible that an open CIO schism may result.

CIO "ROTTEN BOROUGHS"

The CIO executive committee consists of the heads of each of the 43 CIO unions. This means that a small, chiefly paper organization, such as the recently established United Construction Workers, has one vote; while the United Rubber Workers with tens of thousands of members also has only one vote. Because of this "rotten borough" system, Lewis may be able to swing a majority in the executive committee, whereas he could not begin to muster the same majority at a convention where voting strength is based on union membership.

The right-wing bloc is determined not to allow the executive committee to put the CIO on record politically or industrially. If Lewis and his left-wing cohorts try to force this, there will be a blow-up which will make labor history.

Grand Books 'Lillian Russell'

THE life story of one of the greatest stars in the history of the country will be reenacted when "Lillian Russell" comes to the Grand Theatre starting next Sunday. Alice Faye has the lead role, cast as Miss Russell. She is supported by such stars as Don Ameche, Edward Arnold, Warren William and Henry Fonda. Critics say that the picture is on an equal with the now famous "Alexander Ragtime Band" movie of last year.

NOTE—Inside reason for the failure of the powerful International Ladies' Garment Workers, former CIO affiliate, to rejoin the AFL—as was generally expected—was the belief that Lewis will be replaced as CIO head, with a complete change in CIO policy. The ILGW is strongly for peace with the AFL, and bolted the CIO because of Lewis' refusal to continue negotiations.

POLITICAL CHAFF

Jack Garner is telling intimates that he is now convinced the President will run again. The V-P says Roosevelt hasn't said anything to him about it, but his opinion is based on "unmistakable indications" . . . The Republican National Committee is making vigorous efforts to line up the Scandinavian vote, important in a dozen states. The John Ericsson Republican League, founded 30 years ago in honor of the inventor of the Monitor, first Union ironclad warship, is being rejuvenated . . . Principal speaker at the recent Ericsson League convention in Chicago was Senator Bob Taft . . . If Floor Leader Sam Rayburn should get the Democratic vice-presidential nomination there will be four candidates for his House post: Lindsay Warren (N. C.), John McCormack (Mass.), Pat Boland (Pa.), and Clifton Woodrum (Va.). The latter will be the choice of the anti-New Dealers and will be vehemently opposed by the administration.

6,700 SHIPYARD STRIKERS VOTE TO RESUME JOB

KEARNY, N. J., June 3—Work was resumed today on two cruisers and two destroyers at the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., after 6700 CIO shipyard workers voted 5 to 1 to end their three-day strike "as a patriotic duty."

The company's previously rejected offer of wage boosts of 2½ to 4 cents an hour was accepted for the time being. But negotiations will continue on the four original strike demands: a flat 10 cents an hour wage increase; union shop; paid vacations, and seniority rights.

Resentment was expressed by several leaders over charges of "treason" hurled in congress because the strike delayed the $43,000,000 naval construction program at the Kearny yards during the current war crisis. A committee of six was named to go to Washington and demand "the cessation of war profiteering and the guarantee of labor rights."

CIO SHOWDOWN

Behind the closed doors of the CIO executive committee convening today (Monday), there will be a showdown which may have far-reaching effect on the future of labor.

Not generally known is the fact that the inner CIO command has been racked by a serious factional split for months.

Heart of the conflict is the question of who shall dominate CIO policy; whether the CIO shall be Communists and fellow-travelers in key positions, or by the moderate trade-union majority. Involved in the struggle is the continued rule of John L. Lewis. Also involved are peace with the AFL, and the CIO's stand on the third term.

Backing John L. Lewis are a number of small, left-wing unions. They are adamantly opposed to peace with the AFL and to Roosevelt. They also eye the national defense program with hostile suspicion and denounce the European war as an "imperialistic struggle."

Opposing this radical coterie are the big CIO affiliates that constitute its real numerical strength—United Rubber Workers, United Auto Workers, and Amalgamated Clothing Workers. Led by brainy Sidney Hillman of the Clothing Workers, recently appointed to the National Defense Council, this faction is pro-third term, pro-Ally, anti-Communist, for peace with the AFL; and in recent weeks, for the elimination of Lewis as CIO president.

When Lewis called today's executive committee meeting, he gave no indication of what would be considered. But the inside word reaching the Hillman group is that Lewis wants to put the committee on record in favor of his anti-third term and anti-AFL stand; also to issue a covertly anti-administration blast on the defense and war issues.

If he attempts to jam these through, it is not impossible that an open CIO schism may result.

CIO "ROTTEN BOROUGHS"

The CIO executive committee consists of the heads of each of the 43 CIO unions. This means that a small, chiefly paper organization, such as the recently established United Construction Workers, has one vote; while the United Rubber Workers with tens of thousands of members also has only one vote. Because of this "rotten borough" system, Lewis may be able to swing a majority in the executive committee, whereas he could not begin to muster the same majority at a convention where voting strength is based on union membership.

The right-wing bloc is determined not to allow the executive committee to put the CIO on record politically or industrially. If Lewis and his left-wing cohorts try to force this, there will be a blow-up which will make labor history.

Grand Books 'Lillian Russell'

THE life story of one of the greatest stars in the history of the country will be reenacted when "Lillian Russell" comes to the Grand Theatre starting next Sunday. Alice Faye has the lead role, cast as Miss Russell. She is supported by such stars as Don Ameche, Edward Arnold, Warren William and Henry Fonda. Critics say that the picture is on an equal with the now famous "Alexander Ragtime Band" movie of last year.

NOTE—Inside reason for the failure of the powerful International Ladies' Garment Workers, former CIO affiliate, to rejoin the AFL—as was generally expected—was the belief that Lewis will be replaced as CIO head, with a complete change in CIO policy. The ILGW is strongly for peace with the AFL, and bolted the CIO because of Lewis' refusal to continue negotiations.

POLITICAL CHAFF

Jack Garner is telling intimates that he is now convinced the President will run again. The V-P says Roosevelt hasn't said anything to him about it, but his opinion is based on "unmistakable indications".... The Republican National Committee is making vigorous efforts to line up the Scandinavian vote, important in a dozen states. The John Ericsson Republican League, founded 30 years ago in honor of the inventor of the Monitor, first Union ironclad warship, is being rejuvenated.... Principal speaker at the recent Ericsson League convention in Chicago was Senator Bob Taft.... If Floor Leader Sam Rayburn should get the Democratic vice-presidential nomination there will be four candidates for his House post: Lindsay Warren (N. C.), John McCormack (Mass.), Pat Boland (Pa.), and Clifton Woodrum (Va.). The latter will be the choice of the anti-New Dealers and will be vehemently opposed by the administration.

ON TO ARMAGEDDON
FOR complete confusion and terror, perhaps Europe needs no more now than the entrance of Russia and Italy into the war.
By all normal processes of reasoning, Russia should be counted out. With one-fourth of the world's area, it certainly doesn't need any more land. It has nearly everything in the way of material resources somewhere or another. It has also vast human resources. It seems to lack only intelligence and decency at the top, to make it a great and prosperous nation. Unfortunately the stupidity and arrogance and blind lust for territory of the ruling group at Moscow have kept the country about as poor and wretched as it was under the czars.
A vivid picture of present conditions there has been given in the Chicago Daily News by Leland Stowe, who so dramatically told the world the story of the Nazi invasion of Norway. Passing through European Russia to the Balkans, he found a virtual famine. There is more hunger in Russia, he says, than there was in the big famine of 1933, when several millions starved to death. The Finnish war nearly wrecked Russia's economy, and peasants are rebelling on collective farms. Planting is late. He fears a devastating famine next winter.
Even so, Stalin may barge into the continental war, by invading the Balkans to retake Bessarabia from Rumania. He and Mussolini between them, on top of the Nazis' slaughter and devastation, might give the finishing touches to European civilization.

SILLY PUBLICITY
THERE seems to be no limit to the burdens imposed on a public official, particularly when he is a candidate for a new office. Cleveland's mayor, running for the United States Senate, must milk a cow in a hotel ball room at a dairy show. The proceeding will be broadcast and will be the highlight of the affair.
As sheer entertainment, this event provides a light note and a laugh or two in a day's grist of tragic and grave news. No doubt there is need for gaiety even in fortunate America. No doubt, too, this is technically a good publicity stunt.
Still, the adult mind can't help wondering whether the dairy industry hasn't really developed far beyond such a performance. Will more or better milk be produced, will distribution problems be

WORLD AT A GLANCE —By— Charles F. Stewart
WASHINGTON gossip is that Attorney General Robert H. Jackson was all set to close in on George Scalise, with charges against him as a federal law violator, when Thomas E. Dewey beat him to it, in his capacity as New York's local district prosecutor.
Scalise has had a deal of advertising as a labor racketeer, if he is one. Whether or not it's true remains to be proved. Anyway, it's reasoned that he looked like a suitable suspect for a vigilant law enforcer to go after. They say that Jackson was all cocked-and-primed to grab him. Only, he wasn't quite quick enough. Dewey had the same hunch but was speedier in acting on it.
Tom, at the time, was away from New York, out in the "sticks", presidentially campaigning for himself, but he rushed word to his Manhattan subordinates to make the "pinch" and they did it.
Thereby Tom stole Bob's potential thunder.
That he'll be able to follow this up by striding Scalise with the lightning of a conviction is still to be seen. Anyhow, he scored ahead with the preliminary detonation.
This is characteristic of Tom Dewey. "Get there first," is his motto.
GEORGE TINKHAM'S BLAST
Representative George Holden Tinkham also let off his firecracker just at this juncture to embarrass the attorney general.
Tinkham, a Boston Republican, cited the testimony of witnesses

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round
BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN
BRAZIL, U. S. CONFER ON AIR BASE
WASHINGTON—Some of the most important State Department conversations in Monroe Doctrine history are now progressing secretly with the Brazilian Government.

They are aimed at protecting South America from Nazi invasion, particularly at preventing surprise air attacks against the Panama Canal.
The discussions contemplate an air base in northern Brazil, and also probably a naval base. Actually these will not be called American air and naval bases. They will be called "cooperation" between the U. S. Army Air Corps and the Brazilian Army, also between the navies of the two countries.
Although not publicly announced, the Air Corps already is arranging to send a group of Army airmen to Brazil to help train Brazilian aviators. In addition, they will also help to improve Brazilian airports, especially in north Brazil, and make them available to U. S. Army planes—when and if.
All this goes back to the President's defense message to Congress in which he pointed to the nearness of the African coast to Brazil—within hopping distance for big bombers.
A glance at the map shows how close Brazil is to the Canary Islands, owned by Fascist Spain, and reported to have been used as bases by German warships. Should the Nazis take over French and British possessions in Africa, Brazil would be extremely close to them. As a matter of fact, Germany does not have to take the Allied colonies to be near Brazil; already she has titular right to the Belgian Congo.
Northern Brazil is sparsely populated and extremely wealthy. In it are vast rubber forests, iron ore deposits, cotton fields. It contains just what Germany needs.
Should Hitler shatter the United Kingdom, U. S. strategists believe northern Brazil would be his first objective in the Western Hemisphere. Hence the hurried negotiations between the State Department and the Brazilian Embassy.

WAR SECRETARY WOODRING
If the President wants to get rid of War Secretary Harry Woodring, it looks as if he would have to blast. The nobby little Kansan is refusing any ordinary sops to vacate.
"Harry," Roosevelt propositions recently, "how'd you like to be Minister to Canada? That's a very important post and will become more so as things develop."
"No, thank you, Mr. President," was the quiet but firm reply. "The only diplomatic post I would consider is St. James."
NOTE—Woodring is reported to be (Continued on Page Three) solved, will more babies get their full requirement of this wholesome food as a result of the cow in the ball room? Do radio, hotels and politicians really depend on such monkeyshines for public attention and approval?

before the interstate commerce commission which indicates, so Tinkham asserts, that President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull have everything fixed to put Uncle Sam into the war soon, on the side of the Allies.
I don't know that anybody considers the Bostonian's dope very conclusive.
Nevertheless, Tinkham expresses himself in a fashion to attract attention. He's a spectacular chap. His whiskers (the only full set in congress) alone serve to make him conspicuous. And he's a big game hunter. He's shot elephants and lions.
This may not make Tinkham an authority on the subject of the administration's war attitude, but his personality's of a sort to get him listened to. He's an annoying critic because he's sure of a sizeable influence whenever he addresses himself to the public. And, of course, there always are folks who choose to believe the kind of charge that he levels against the president and the state secretary.
PROBABLY ONLY A COINCIDENCE
Well, simultaneously with Representative Tinkham's explosion, Attorney Jackson announced a justice department program ostensibly designed to keep us OUT of the war.
I surmise that the juxtaposition of the Tinkham blast and the Jackson announcement was a matter of mere coincidence.
The Jacksonian scheme sounds reasonable.
Bob's version is that there doubtless is a good bit of Communist, Naziistic, Fascist and miscellaneous seditious activity abroad in the land plus propaganda, espionage and prospective sabotage. The justice department's federal bureau of investigation probes this sort of thing, but it does only detective work; no actual prosecuting.
FEDERAL ATTORNEYS' JOB
The F. B. I. turns this latter job over to local federal district attorneys throughout the country. Now these birds, far flung and more or less haphazard, concludes the attorney general, in spots are irresponsible. In some cases, suggests Bob, they may be inefficient; in other cases, though over zeal they may disregard civil liberties.
So the justice department has created a new unit, under Lawrence M. C. Smith, to boss the task of prosecution. Chief J. Edgar Hoover's F. B. I.'s to go on with its detecting; local prosecutors will continue to do the prosecuting. L. M. C. Smith's outfit's function is supervisory.
Is this satisfactory? By no means—to Representative Tinkham.
G. Holden T.'s story is that his "exposure" forced the administration to make a counter-declaration, through the justice department. It just proves his thesis, he argues. Indeed, he's capitalizing on it. He doesn't mind anyone growling at him. He's shot lions.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN
CANDID cameras being what they are in this modern age of ingenuity and invention, "Maid to Measure" was reviewed pictorially in the newspapers on the day after the play.
A full page of publicity they could never have afforded was given the amateur cast in one big afternoon daily. It seems that a staff photographer had been in the audience with super-sensitive film. His page layout therefore carried no stilted poses.
Full length of the page—20 inches—was a side view of Gayle Dixon, snapped at the moment when she had stood in a bathing suit beside a faked swimming pool, about to "dive." That had been in Act I, where the hero, Ted, had discovered her. A great many other gentlemen about the city, young and old, "discovered" Gayle when this big portrait of her was printed.
Gayle had what the boys refer to as everything. She was (so the caption revealed) about five feet six inches tall. Hair was a straw-to-honey color, straight by nature, but curled by experts. Her weight was 126 pounds. Her figure was undeniably statuesque, erect, beautiful.
The caption added with reasonable accuracy that Miss Dixon was a devotee of swimming, tennis, badminton and golf. She had never touched a golf stick, but she was fair at the other sports; and had been in school when she had a little time for them.
This paper also pictured the other lead in the cast, Mr. William Ward Bailey, who also directed the play. The caption gave Bill quite a build-up also, mentioning his recent All-American rating in college football and predicting big things for him on the stage if he wanted it so. Bill was shown with him arm around a bespectacled, owl-eyed young man who had acted a small bit in one of the scenes. That, the caption said, was Mr. Jeremy Tucker, grandson of the distinguished philanthropist, Benjamin W. Merrifield, and heir to the Merrifield millions.
Arrayed in sundry positions around and behind these three personages from "Maid to Measure" were photographs of the six lovely girls. There was a scene in a rope swing where Tempe Hyde's short but shapely legs pointed upward as the arc of her swing took her well out toward the audience. This added unmistakable "oomph" to the picture layout. There was a snap of Lola Montesa with her guitar, her dark Spanish eyes and slender beauty staged adroitly under a bower of spring blossoms. There was a group shot in which four girls were singing; the music had been mediocre but the beauty superb.
The city's one tabloid newspaper, a sheet never bothered much with scruples, lacked anything startling for its early editions that day after the play at The Oaks, so it brewed sensation of its own.
CAPITALIST TEMPTS GRANDSON WITH GIRLS
The front page headline read.
Moreover, it was partly true, even though indelicate. Fortunately no copies of this particular paper ever reached Mr. Merrifield or any of those in his household. But it did circulate generously in various levels of city society.
Upshot of all this attention was the fact that "everybody" resumed talking about the Merrifield Little Theater movement and activity in the Merrifield home in general. That is, interest that had already been created now began to multiply. Social re-opening of The Oaks had been one thing. Successful drama of youth was another. Gossip bubbled in where facts were lacking.
Of course the nine young people now at The Oaks were responsive to all this. Youths normally flourish under attention anyway, and the sense of "doing things" thrilled those nine now. Even Jeremy, shy one of the nine, sensed the pressure of public opinion and began to talk about it.
"I—I say, it must have been a pretty good play, Bailey!" he volunteered. "The papers, and people—there's a lot of talk."
"You're telling me!" Bill grinned. "I've just been to town. I found myself important. After the first half hour I stuck out my chest and strutted like a peacock."
"Oh!" Jeremy looked distressed. "But isn't it, ah, unseemly, to allow oneself to feel—"
Bill sighed. "For Pete's sake, Jeremy, when will you stop being literal? Are you English?"
"English? You mean—"
"I mean I wasn't really contented, you mug. At least, I hope I wasn't. But I don't mind having people say the play was good."
"Oh, no, no, indeed, I—I see." "I wonder! But skip it, kid. You did your part swell, you know. Your grandpaw is happy about it."
"Grandfather is delighted," Jeremy declared. "He was quite indignant at Mr. Weems this morning for suggesting that so much excitement might be out of place around The Oaks. You should have heard grandfather, ah—berating Mr. Weems. They seem to quarrel a great deal, and yet—"
Gayle had come up and she heard Jeremy.
"And yet they are more attached to each other than brothers are," she supplied. "They're two old dears. They enjoy scrapping."
"It's very odd," Jeremy said, seriously.
"No. It's human. They understand each other," Gayle smiled at him. "What were you two talking about?"
"The play," Bill said.
"Well, let's rest from that. The post-mortem has been satisfactory. I told the other girls not to come today because I knew they would be tired to tears. We are here alone. Can't we three change the subject? Come on—let's walk."
She moved between them and together they started out across the spacious lawn on the Merrifield estate. Near the side of the house there was a mass of shrubbery left to grow in its own irregular way, affording fine contrast to the formally clipped hedges out front. Into and under this, along a gravelled

Bacteria Evades Most Vigorous Dishwashers
By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
To what extent is disease spread by unclean eating utensils?
● THERE IS NO question that a great many bacteria are left on eating utensils both in public restaurants and in homes even after thorough cleaning. But they cannot do very much harm.
A bacteriologic survey of public places in which food or beverages were sold was made in a small town. The cleanliness of the kitchens was good; metal sinks were used; clean towels were used for drying. Bacteriologic swabs taken from the edges of glasses, spoons and forks which would come in contact with the mouth were made especially after the noon or evening rush period. Temperature of the wash water was from about 100 to 140 degrees with a rinse water of from about 50 to 150 degrees.
Naturally, as all bacteriologists know, a certain number of bacteria would be present. But the amount of bacteria on these utensils and in the rinse and wash water was very much higher than would be considered normal, even though the temperature of the wash and rinse water was high enough to kill many bacteria.
Chlorine Added
It was found that if a chlorine concentration of 100 parts per million water is used, however, that the results are very much different and highly gratifying. Every other feature—the temperature of the water, the cleanliness of the towels and the care of washing was the same, the only change

A vivid picture of present conditions there has been given in the Chicago Daily News by Leland Stowe, who so dramatically told the world the story of the Nazi invasion of Norway. Passing through European Russia to the Balkans, he found a virtual famine. There is more hunger in Russia, he says, than there was in the big famine of 1933, when several millions starved to death. The Finnish war nearly wrecked Russia's economy, and peasants are rebelling on collective farms. Planting is late. He fears a devastating famine next winter.
Even so, Stalin may barge into the continental war, by invading the Balkans to retake Bessarabia from Rumania. He and Mussolini between them, on top of the Nazis' slaughter and devastation, might give the finishing touches to European civilization.

WAR SECRETARY WOODRING
If the President wants to get rid of War Secretary Harry Woodring, it looks as if he would have to blast. The nobly little Kansan is refusing any ordinary sops to vacate.
"Harry," Roosevelt propositions recently, "how'd you like to be Minister to Canada? That's a very important post and will become more so as things develop."
"No, thank you, Mr. President," was the quiet but firm reply. "The only diplomatic post I would consider is St. James."

SILLY PUBLICITY
THERE seems to be no limit to the burdens imposed on a public official, particularly when he is a candidate for a new office. Cleveland's mayor, running for the United States Senate, must milk a cow in a hotel ball room at a dairy show. The proceeding will be broadcast and will be the highlight of the affair.
As sheer entertainment, this event provides a light note and a laugh or two in a day's grist of tragic and grave news. No doubt there is need for gaiety even in fortunate America. No doubt, too, this is technically a good publicity stunt.
Still, the adult mind can't help wondering whether the dairy industry hasn't really developed far beyond such a performance. Will more or better milk be produced, will distribution problems be

WORLD AT A GLANCE —By— Charles F. Stewart
WASHINGTON gossip is that Attorney General Robert H. Jackson was all set to close in on George Scallie, with charges against him as a federal law violator, when Thomas E. Dewey beat him to it, in his capacity as New York's local district prosecutor.
Scallie has had a deal of advertising as a labor racketeer, if he is one. Whether or not it's true remains to be proved. Anyway, it's reasoned that he looked like a suitable suspect for a vigilant law enforcer to go after. They say that Jackson was all cocked-and-primed to grab him. Only, he wasn't quite quick enough. Dewey had the same hunch but was speedier in acting on it.
Tom, at the time, was away from New York, out in the "sticks", presidentially campaigning for himself, but he rushed word to his Manhattan subordinates to make the "pinch" and they did it.
Thereby Tom stole Bob's potential thunder.
That he'll be able to follow this up by striking Scallie with the lightning of a conviction is still to be seen. Anyhow, he scored ahead with the preliminary detonation.
This is characteristic of Tom Dewey. "Get there first," is his motto.
GEORGE TINKHAM'S BLAST
Representative George Holden Tinkham also let off his firecracker just at this juncture to embarrass the attorney general.
Tinkham, a Boston Republican, cited the testimony of witnesses before the interstate commerce commission which indicates, so Tinkham asserts, that President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull have everything fixed to put Uncle Sam into the war soon, on the side of the Allies.
I don't know that anybody considers the Bostonian's dope very conclusive.
Nevertheless, Tinkham expresses himself in a fashion to attract attention. He's a spectacular chap. His whiskers (the only full set in congress) alone serve to make him conspicuous. And he's a big game hunter. He's shot elephants and lions.
This may not make Tinkham an authority on the subject of the administration's war attitude, but his personality's of a sort to get him listened to. He's an annoying critic because he's sure of a sizeable influence whenever he addresses himself to the public. And, of course, there always are folks who choose to believe the kind of charge that he levels against the president and the state secretary.
PROBABLY ONLY A COINCIDENCE
Well, simultaneously with Representative Tinkham's explosion, Attorney Jackson announced a justice department program ostensibly designed to keep us OUT of the war.
I surmise that the juxtaposition of the Tinkham blast and the Jackson announcement was a matter of mere coincidence.
The Jacksonian scheme sounds reasonable.
Bob's version is that there doubtless is a good bit of Communist, Nazi, Fascist and miscellaneous seditious activity abroad in the land plus propaganda, espionage and prospective sabotage. The justice department's federal bureau of investigation probes this sort of thing, but it does only detective work; no actual prosecuting.
FEDERAL ATTORNEYS' JOB
The F. B. I. turns this latter job over to local federal district attorneys throughout the country. Now these birds, far flung and more or less haphazard, concludes the attorney general, in spots are irresponsible. In some cases, suggests Bob, they may be inefficient; in other cases, though over zeal they may disregard civil liberties.
So the justice department has created a new unit, under Lawrence M. C. Smith, to boss the task of prosecution. Chief J. Edgar Hoover's F. B. I.'s to go on with its detecting; local prosecutors will continue to do the prosecuting. L. M. C. Smith's outfit's function is supervisory.
Is this satisfactory? By no means—to Representative Tinkham.
G. Holden T.'s story is that his "exposure" forced the administration to make a counter-declaration, through the justice department. It just proves his thesis, he argues. Indeed, he's capitalizing on it. He doesn't mind anyone growling at him. He's shot lions.

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION
CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN
CANDID cameras being what they are in this modern age of ingenuity and invention, "Maid to Measure" was reviewed pictorially in the newspapers on the day after the play.
A full page of publicity they could never have afforded was given the amateur cast in one big afternoon daily. It seems that a staff photographer had been in the audience with super-sensitive film. His page layout therefore carried no stilted poses.
Full length of the page—20 inches—was a side view of Gayle Dixon, snapped at the moment when she had stood in a bathing suit beside a faked swimming pool, about to "dive." That had been in Act I, where the hero, Ted, had discovered her. A great many other gentlemen about the city, young and old, "discovered" Gayle when this big portrait of her was printed.
Gayle had what the boys refer to as everything. She was (so the caption revealed) about five feet six inches tall. Hair was a straw-to-honey color, straight by nature, but curled by experts. Her weight was 126 pounds. Her figure was undeniably statuesque, erect, beautiful.
The caption added with reasonable accuracy that Miss Dixon was a devotee of swimming, tennis, badminton and golf. She had never touched a golf stick, but she was fair at the other sports; or had been in school when she had a little time for them.
This paper also pictured the other lead in the cast, Mr. William Ward Bailey, who also directed the play. The caption gave Bill quite a build-up also, mentioning his recent All-American rating in college football and predicting big things for him on the stage if he wanted it so. Bill was shown with him arm around a bespectacled, owl-eyed young man who had acted a small bit in one of the scenes. That, the caption said, was Mr. Jeremy Tucker, grandson of the distinguished philanthropist, Benjamin W. Merrifield, and heir to the Merrifield millions.
Arrayed in sundry positions around and behind these three personages from "Maid to Measure" were photographs of the six lovely girls. There was a scene in a rope swing where Tempe Hyde's short but shapely legs pointed upward as the arc of her swing took her well out toward the audience. This added unmistakable "comph" to the picture layout. There was a snap of Lola Montesa with her guitar, her dark Spanish eyes and slender beauty staged adroitly under a bower of spring blossoms. There was a group shot in which four girls were singing; the music had been mediocre but the beauty superb.
The city's one tabloid newspaper, a sheet never bothered much with scruples, lacked anything startling for its early editions that day after the play at The Oaks, so it brewed sensation of its own.
Moreover, it was partly true, even though indelicate. Fortunately no copies of this particular paper ever reached Mr. Merrifield or any of those in his household. But it did circulate generously in various levels of city society.
Upshot of all this attention was the fact that "everybody" resumed talking about the Merrifield Little Theater movement, and activity in the Merrifield home in general. That is, interest that had already been created now began to multiply. Social re-opening of The Oaks had been one thing. Successful drama of youth was another. Gossip bubbled in where facts were lacking.
Of course the nine young people now at The Oaks were responsive to all this. Youths normally flourish under attention anyway, and the sense of "doing things" thrilled those nine now. Even Jeremy, shy one of the nine, sensed the pressure of public opinion and began to talk about it.
"It—it—I say, it must have been a pretty good play, Bailey," he volunteered. "The papers, and people—there's a lot of talk."
"You're telling me!" Bill grinned. "I've just been to town. I found myself important. After the first half hour I stuck out my chest and strutted like a peacock."
"Oh!" Jeremy looked distressed. "But isn't it, ah, unseemly, to allow oneself to—to feel—"
Bill sighed. "For Pete's sake, Jeremy, when will you stop being literal? Are you English?"
"English? You mean—"
"I mean I wasn't really excited, you mug. At least, I hope I wasn't. But I don't mind having people say the play was good."
"Oh, no, no, indeed, I—I see."
"I wonder! But skip it, kid. You did your part swell, yourself. I hope your grandpaw is happy about it."
"Grandfather is delighted," Jeremy declared. "He was quite indignant at Mr. Veems this morning for suggesting that so much excitement might be out of place around The Oaks. You should have heard grandfather, ah—berating Mr. Veems. They seem to quarrel a great deal, and yet—"
Gayle had come up and she heard Jeremy.
"And yet they are more attached to each other than brothers are," she supplied. "They're two old dears. They enjoy scrapping."
"It's very odd," Jeremy said, seriously.
"No. It's human. They understand each other." Gayle smiled at him. "What were you two talking about?"
"The play," Bill said.
"Well, let's rest from that. The post-mortem has been satisfactory. I told the other girls not to come today because I knew they would be tired to tears. We are here alone. Can't we three change the subject? Come on—let's walk."
She moved between them and together they started out across the spacious lawn on the Merrifield estate. Near the side of the house here was a mass of shrubbery left to grow in its own irregular way, affording fine contrast to the formally clipped hedges out front. Into and under this, along a graveled

Today's Horoscope
The stars favor those whose birthdays are today. They will gain by inheritance during the next year, and enjoy general good fortune. Born today a child will be courageous, ambitious, energetic, prudent, persevering and consequently generally fortunate. He or she will, however, be very partial, indeed to the good things of life.

Bacteria Evades Most Vigorous Dishwashers
By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
To what extent is disease spread by unclean eating utensils?
● THERE IS NO question that a great many bacteria are left on eating utensils both in public restaurants and in homes even after thorough cleaning. But they can't do very much harm.
A bacteriologic survey of public places in which food or beverages were sold was made in a small town. The cleanliness of the kitchens was good; metal sinks were used; clean towels were used for drying. Bacteriologic swabs taken from the edges of glasses, spoons and forks which would come in contact with the mouth were made especially after the noon or evening rush period. Temperature of the wash water was from about 100 to 140 degrees with a rinse water of from about 50 to 150 degrees.
Naturally, as all bacteriologists know, a certain number of bacteria would be present. But the amount of bacteria on these utensils and in the rinse and wash water was very much higher than would be considered normal, even though the temperature of the wash and rinse water was high enough to kill many bacteria.
Chlorine Added
It was found that if a chlorine concentration of 100 parts per million water is used, however, that the results are very much different and highly gratifying. Every other feature—the temperature of the water, the cleanliness of the towels and the care of washing was the same, the only change

Benevolent Association
Conducts Informal Tea

Clark Will Home
Scene Of Party
Saturday

Large bouquets of lovely spring flowers formed the seasonable background for the informal tea of the Circleville Benevolent Association Saturday at the home of Mrs. Clark Will, West Mound Street. The affair was planned for the solicitors of the Maintenance Week Drive, interested friends and members of the association. More than 30 called between the hours of 3 and 5 p. m. The drive is being conducted this week.

A feature of the tea was the informal talk of Miss Clara Southward, social worker, who told many interesting details of her work with the needy of Circleville and gave a brief history of the work of the Benevolent Association in the community. Beginning in 1911 as a purely benevolent organization, its health work in the community was the result of the Monday Club winning the services of a health nurse for a brief period in a state contest. The Monday Club turned the work of the nurse to the association and from that time health work was a part of its duties, Miss Southward said in opening her talk.

She said that the association has sponsored during its history, day nurseries, health clinics, health booths at the Pumpkin Shows, Mothers' Welfare Clubs and milk in schools. The last project has been discontinued for lack of funds, although Miss Southward said that several families are supplied milk daily.

Miss Southward said that the question is asked often concerning the need for a Benevolent Association when so many organizations are now functioning to aid the needy. She said that the organization filled a need which was not filled by special projects of the government, and helped many who do not get help from these projects. While many heads of families work on W. P. A., Miss Southward said that their earnings were not adequate for the large families which most of them have. The association helps those families not eligible for direct relief, she said, those who need assistance over more or less short periods. Then too, she continued, the association tries to give help other than material, in a neighborly interest in persons facing problems. She mentioned that many come to the city cottage on visiting days to discuss their home problems and ask help and advice.

Miss Southward said that the greatest problem in welfare work in Circleville still is the poor housing condition. She showed many pictures of homes of the needy in Circleville, some not much better than sheds. She stressed the need for furniture, dishes and articles for homes, in addition to used clothing for men, women and children.

Questions answered by Miss Southward gave a better understanding of benevolent work as carried on by the association in Circleville.

Mrs. C. E. Groce presided at the tea service when the guests gathered around the tea table in the dining room for an informal social half-hour. A white pottery bowl of weigela, columbine and painted daisies on a mirror plaque flanked with ivory tapers in the squat silver holders centered the table.

Mrs. W. T. Ulm, Mrs. Orville Trone, Miss Florence Duntun, Mrs. C. G. Stewart and Mrs. W. W. Robinson assisted in the dining room.

John Mader heads the dance committee comprised of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Hedges, Mr. and Mrs. Joe W. Adkins, Jr., Miss Mary Newmyer, William Crist and George Myers.

Dancing, which will begin at 10 p. m., will continue until 1.

In addition to the several large dances planned for the summer the committee is planning a series of informal dances for club members. These will be held each week on the large porch of the club house, when dancing will be enjoyed to the music of the nickelodeon.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

SIGNAL THE RIGHT SUIT

WHENEVER it is obvious that your partner is going to shift from the suit in which he wins a trick, to one of the other side suits, it is your job to let him know which you prefer. This is done by experienced campaigners by means of a signal with the card you play to his trick. If it is clearly your lowest card in that suit, you indicate a desire for a lead of the lower-ranking side suit on the next trick. If it is definitely a higher-than-your-lowest card, you are positively asking him to shift to the higher-ranking of the other two suits.

▲ A 10 9 6
♦ K J 6 3
♣ K J 6 3

If your partner leads the A of your heart suit against South's 4-Spades, and the above hand is laid down as dummy, the correct card for you to play on that trick is clearly delineated if you hold any of the following hands:

1. ♦ 5 4 2. ♦ 5 4
♥ K Q 8 4 2 ♥ K Q 8 4 2
♦ A Q 7 ♦ 7 5 2
♣ 7 5 2 ♣ A Q 7

♥ K Q 8 4 3 2 ♥ K Q 8 4 3 2
♦ None ♦ 7 5 4 2
♣ 7 5 4 2 ♣ None

With any of these, you stand a very good chance of beating the contract if your partner makes the correct shift, and apparently hardly any chance if he makes the wrong one. Since the dummy shows exactly the same holding in both diamonds and clubs, your partner has nothing to guide him except the card you play.

You urgently wish a diamond lead in the case of hands No. 1 and No. 3, and command its lead by playing the heart 8 on the first trick. With Nos. 2 and 4, you just as urgently desire a lead of clubs, which you indicate with a play of your heart 2, the lowest you can give him.

The low signal is not quite as clear-cut as that of the high card asking for a diamond lead, for the simple reason that there is a slight amount of ambiguity attached to it. Your partner might think you were merely telling him not to repeat the suit and therefore preferred a lead of trumps to cut down the ruffing possibilities for the declarer. However, if your hand happened to be such that you preferred a trump lead, your best play would be the 4, neither emphatically high nor low.

Variegated Plants for Shade

There is a very useful plant which is so accommodating it will grow in soil which is too poor for most plants. Furthermore, this plant will grow in full shade. The scientific name of this very cooperative plant is Aegopodium, or Bishop's-weed. It is also commonly called Goutweed because years ago in England the leaves of the plant were boiled and then used as a poultice in the treatment of gout. The plant should be better known and more frequently used for it is splendid for foliage purposes and the variegated markings of its leaves makes it attractive in shady spots.

The leaves of Bishop's-weed are margined with white, as shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph.

It may be necessary to think up a new figure for impregnable strength, if the Rock of Gibraltar becomes useless as a British stronghold.

The plants are fast-growing, forming matts of foliage which are especially useful for edging purposes or as a low ground cover. It grows about 12 inches high.

Bishop's-weed blooms in June, having small white flowers. The plants can easily be increased by dividing the roots in either Spring or Fall.

Keep the lawn mowed regularly. As the weather becomes hotter set the knives higher so as to leave a greater length of grass. This will help to prevent burning of the roots and will do away with the necessity of constant watering in order to keep the lawn green.

More interest is being taken each year in Summer flowering bulbs and tubers. Dahlias may be secured and planted out now in the form of small started plants, which is the least expensive way to try the newer sorts.

Much staking will have to be done this month. All tall-growing perennials will require support before the tops become heavy enough to break down under their own weight and the forces of the elements. Staking while growth proceeds gives better results and is less conspicuous than when it is left until the plants are tall and bushy.

At this time, plants recover quickly from cutting back and all the evergreen hedges and bushes may be given a clipping or shearing into the desired shape. Deciduous hedges especially should be kept from growing too far out of the desired size.

Red spider mites may be driven from hollyhocks and phlox by a spray of cold water on the under sides of the leaves. This should be done toward evening. Rust, blight and mildew on phlox, snapdragons, hollyhocks and delphiniums may be attacked by spraying or dusting them at regular intervals with Bordeaux mixture or colloidal sulphur.

Now is a good time to start the seed of many perennials. A sheltered frame is an ideal place, but where this is not available, a well prepared spot in the garden will serve. Sow in rows and thin out when the seedlings come up. A screen of lath or burlap to protect the seedlings from the sun will help them to make more satisfactory growth.

Several states have been penalized for misuse of road funds by withdrawal of part of their share of federal highway aid funds. In consequence there has been a decline in such misuse of highway user taxes.

Benevolent Association
Conducts Informal Tea

Clark Will Home
Scene Of Party
Saturday

Large bouquets of lovely spring flowers formed the seasonable background for the informal tea of the Circleville Benevolent Association Saturday at the home of Mrs. Clark Will, West Mound Street. The affair was planned for the solicitors of the Maintenance Week Drive, interested friends and members of the association. More than 30 called between the hours of 3 and 5 p. m. The drive is being conducted this week.

A feature of the tea was the informal talk of Miss Clara Southward, social worker, who told many interesting details of her work with the needy of Circleville and gave a brief history of the work of the Benevolent Association in the community.

Beginning in 1911 as a purely benevolent organization, its health work in the community was the result of the Monday Club winning the services of a health nurse for a brief period in a state contest. The Monday Club turned the work of the nurse to the association and from that time health work was a part of its duties, Miss Southward said in opening her talk.

She said that the association has sponsored during its history, day nurseries, health clinics, health booths at the Pumpkin Shows, Mothers' Welfare Clubs and milk in schools. The last project has been discontinued for lack of funds, although Miss Southward said that several families are supplied milk daily.

Miss Southward said that the question is asked often concerning the need for a Benevolent Association when so many organizations are now functioning to aid the needy. She said that the organization filled a need which was not filled by special projects of the government, and helped many who do not get help from these projects. While many heads of families work on W. P. A., Miss Southward said that their earnings were not adequate for the large families which most of them have. The association helps those families not eligible for direct relief, she said, those who need assistance over more or less short periods. Then too, she continued, the association tries to give help other than material, in a neighborly interest in persons facing problems.

She mentioned that many come to the city cottage on visiting days to discuss their home problems and ask help and advice. Miss Southward said that the greatest problem in welfare work in Circleville still is the poor housing condition. She showed many pictures of homes of the needy in Circleville, some not much better than sheds. She stressed the need for furniture, dishes and articles for homes, in addition to used clothing for men, women and children.

Questions answered by Miss Southward gave a better understanding of benevolent work as carried on by the association in Circleville.

Mrs. C. E. Groce presided at the tea service when the guests gathered around the tea table in the dining room for an informal social half-hour. A white pottery bowl of weigela, columbine and painted daisies on a mirror plaque flanked with ivory tapers in the squat silver holders centered the table.

Mrs. W. T. Elm, Mrs. Orville Trone, Miss Florence Dunton, Mrs. C. G. Stewart and Mrs. W. W. Robinson assisted in the dining room.

Country Club Dance
Ernie McKay and his eight piece orchestra of Columbus will furnish the music Saturday for the opening dance of the summer season of the Pickaway Country Club. The dance which is open to the public as well as club members and friends will be in the Old Barn. The McKay orchestra has been playing at the State Restaurant, Columbus.

John Mader heads the dance committee comprised of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Hedges, Mr. and Mrs. Joe W. Adkins, Jr., Miss Mary Newmyer, William Crist and George Myers.

Dancing, which will begin at 10 p. m., will continue until 1. In addition to the several large dances planned for the summer the committee is planning a series of informal dances for club members. These will be held each week on the large porch of the club house, when dancing will be enjoyed to the music of the nickelodeon.

Washington Alumni Banquet
Seventy-six members were served the delightful banquet Saturday at the annual meeting of the Washington Alumni Association in Washington Township school auditorium. The school colors of purple and white and many candles decorated the tables set in the shape of a U and one single table where

SIGNAL THE RIGHT SUIT

WHENEVER it is obvious that your partner is going to shift from the suit in which he wins a trick, to one of the other side suits, it is your job to let him know which you prefer. This is done by experienced campaigners by means of a signal with the card you play to his trick. If it is clearly your lowest card in that suit, you indicate a desire for a lead of the lower-ranking side suit on the next trick. If it is definitely a higher-than-your-lowest card, you are positively asking him to shift to the higher-ranking of the other two suits.

STARS SAY—

For Monday, June 3

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a particularly lively and enterprising day, with things stirring in happy and successful grooves, both in business and personal activities. There may be much industry and application, attracting the attention of superiors and employers, who will be generous in tokens of preferment and reward. Property values show stability.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a successful and pleasant year, in which old matters, faithful service as well as current endeavors may enjoy surprising recognition from superiors. These should give stability to the investments and values are due for increase and security. There might be an inheritance, or gift.

A child born on this day should be industrious, responsible, steadfast and prudent, standing well with its employers, superiors and in its social relations. It will probably enjoy substantial tokens of such esteem.

ACE GOLFERS MAY PLAY RED CROSS EXHIBITION
CHICAGO, June 3—Tom Walsh, president of the Professional Golfers Association, revealed today plans are afoot to have the nation's leading golfers take part in a drive to raise funds for the Red Cross.

Walsh said the idea already had been broached to other PGA officials, and that it would be discussed further later this week when he goes to Cleveland for the National Open.

THE HEROES AND THE GOATS
HEROES—Bucky Walters, Cincinnati ace, whose five-hitter against the Boston Bees in the opener of a twin brought him his ninth straight victory of the year without a loss; George Selkirk, New York Yankee outfielder, who hit his fifth and sixth homers as the St. Louis Browns were slaughtered in two games.

GOATS—Bill Lee, Chicago Cubs' pitcher, who went into the ninth inning of the first game leading Brooklyn, 2 to 1, but wound up losing on a Dodger rally, 3 to 2; Martin Marion, St. Louis Cardinal shortstop, who lost Art Mahan's pop fly in the sun enabling the Phillies to rally for four runs, win the opener and split a doubleheader.

Lesnevich completed heavy training Sunday night and will not don the gloves again until he steps into the ring Wednesday.

Conn, on the other hand, reduced his weight to the 175 pound limit over the weekend and turned in a clever nine round exhibition before more than 300 spectators. He concludes his training today.

The champion has been confident right along that he will stop the challenger via the K. O. route but those who have been following the men in training were inclined to doubt this confidence.

Lesnevich, during training, has been punching harder than at any time during his career. His right, especially, has been exceedingly vicious as well as accurate.

Godoy-Louis Contest May Draw Small Garden Gate

By Pat Robinson

NEW YORK, June 3—Along Broadway today we discover... big stem specs figure Godoy-Louis fight won't draw over $200,000... "because with U. S. Steel selling around 45... Wall Street playboys don't go in for those $27.50 ringside pews in a large way..."

Not all fighters are punch-drunk... some of them are really artistic... in fact, some can draw better than they can fight...

Al Gillette... former feather... is now a commercial artist... ditto Jose Rayo... Spanish feather... Lightweight Billy Wallace is studying for an operative career... Primo Carnera was a pretty fair cartoonist... so, too, is George Abrams... whose had his work used in the press... and Lighthweight Billy Conn and Welter Jackie Donovan can surprise you with a pen and pencil.

Earl Stalberg... Marquette's 14-foot pole vaulter... son of a tailor... practises his dad's trade... to earn his way through college... Add famous son of more famous fathers... Walter Hagen, Jr. is captain of Notre Dame's golf team... Smokey Joe Wood, Jr. recently pitched a no-hitter for Yale against Wesleyan... and Ziggy Sears, Jr... son of the umpire... is a slugging catcher for Newark... and a sure bet to make the big leagues... where he'll have many a chance to argue with the old man... and with the usual result.

Hal Gustafson... Penn's great end of last fall... never played college baseball... until his senior year... when he not only won the first base job in a hurry... but also led the Eastern Intercollegiate League in hitting...

And Lighthweight Champion Lew Jenkins' real first monicker is Verlin... yes, Verlin... but we wouldn't advise you to call him that...

Juan Molina... champion Chilean jockey... will soon show Californians how he does it... and what ever became of all the ebony hued jockeys?... Old Connie Mack sure has a corner on those Duke University athletes... Larry Davis... Duke second sacker... joins the A's today...

And Bill Brandt quizzes... who finished the 1926 season in right field for the Giants after Pep Young was forced to quit?... believe it or not... the correct answer is Bill Terry... and we recall that Bill was no Tris Speaker... as an outfielder... selah...

MILLERS CLIMB NEARER KASEYS IN ASSOCIATION

COLUMBUS, June 3—The nip-and-tuck battle for the American Association leadership narrowed a bit further today as Minneapolis, by defeating St. Paul 9 to 8, climbed within one and one-half games of the leading Kansas City Blues.

The Blues had to be content with a split in the twin bill with Milwaukee, dropping the first tilt, 7 to 4, but shutting out the Brewers in the nightcap, 6 to 0. Three hit pitching by Charley Stencu in the second session gave him his fifth win of the year and the Blues the odd game of the five game series.

Minneapolis gained a half-game on the leaders when they outsluged St. Paul to take the one-run decision. The game was featured by homers by Ronaldson, Geary and Fausett of the Millers, and Morgan of the Saints.

Columbus and Toledo split a double feature, the Birds winning the opener, 4 to 3, but being shut-out in the finale, 3 to 0. Both squads scored all their runs in the third stanza in the first setto, Toledo counted three times in the first of the nightcap as Johnny Whitehead limited the Birds to four hits. The series went to Columbus, three games to one.

A five-run spree in the fourth gave Louisville a 7 to 4 victory over the Indianapolis Indians. Catcher George Lacy climaxed the rally with a four-bagger.

ODDS FAVORING CONN TO THUMP LESNEVICH LOW

DETROIT, June 3—Billy Conn today was no better than a 6 to 5 choice to retain his light heavyweight boxing championship against Gus Lesnevich in a 15-round bout in Olympia Stadium Wednesday night.

In a nine round drill Sunday afternoon, Lesnevich battered three sparring partners and turned in an all-around performance that caused fight followers to rally to his support.

Lesnevich completed heavy training Sunday night and will not don the gloves again until he steps into the ring Wednesday.

Conn, on the other hand, reduced his weight to the 175 pound limit over the weekend and turned in a clever nine round exhibition before more than 300 spectators. He concludes his training today.

The champion has been confident right along that he will stop the challenger via the K. O. route but those who have been following the men in training were inclined to doubt this confidence.

REDS TO PITCH DERRINGER; TWIN BILL IS DIVIDED

CINCINNATI, June 3 — Big Paul Derringer was to take the mound this afternoon in quest of his sixth hurling victory as the Cincinnati Reds, pace-makers in the National League, attempt to secure revenge for the 2 to 0 shut-out handed them yesterday by the Boston Bees in the second feature of a twin tilt.

The first game was hurled by Bucky Walters—no more need be said. Bucky chalked up his ninth straight win by allowing only five hits, while his mates were pounding a trio of Beantown chucks for 14 bingles to win, 11 to 1, Johnny Rizzo, who wasn't good enough for Pittsburgh fans, hit for the circuit twice and drove in four counters.

Milkman Jim Turner was charged with the loss of the nightcap, although he allowed only four hits. He fell victim to Dick Merriwell, whose last name is Errickson, who granted the slugging Reds eight bingles, but no runs. Cincinnati left nine men stranded on the basepaths.

Joe Sullivan, Boston southpaw, was to oppose Derringer in today's game.

178,716 Acres Listed

Harvest Of Pea Crop In Pickaway Area Nearly Ready To Start

Thirty-seven township Soil Conservation committeemen began Monday to measure fields of farmers throughout Pickaway County who have signed with the AAA conservation program. The check is being made to determine the benefit payments each farmer is to receive.

John Boggs, Pickaway County soil conservation committee chairman, reported Monday that 178,716 acres of crop land, or 71 percent of Pickaway County's crop land had been signed.

The total AAA acreage in each township in Pickaway County is: Circleville Township, 5,944.7 acres.

Darby Township, 11,031.1 acres.

Deercreek Township, 17,778.8 acres.

Harrison Township, 10,312.0 acres.

Jackson Township, 16,914.2 acres.

Madison Township, 9,244.9 acres.

Monroe Township, 14,964.5 acres.

Muhlenberg Township, 7,638.5 acres.

Perry Township, 14,481.8 acres.

Pickaway Township, 17,014.1 acres.

Saltcreek Township, 11,642.6 acres.

Scioto Township, 11,388.3 acres.

Walnut Township, 15,871.5 acres.

Washington Township, 5,713.3 acres.

Wayne Township, 8,748.5 acres.

Pea Harvest May Start This Week

The pea harvest in Pickaway County may get under way the last of this week or the first of next if the weather continues warm during the next few days. One canning company executive said Monday that another day or two of sunshine will put the peas in condition for harvesting by Friday.

The pea crop is expected to be a large one, the growing weather being fairly satisfactory.

Peas provide many Pickaway County farmers an excellent cash crop.

TWO U. S. SHIPS CARRY THROGS ACROSS OCEAN

GALWAY, Eire, June 3—The United States liner President Roosevelt was en route to the United States today, jammed with Americans fleeing from Europe's war.

Several hundred Americans, unable to obtain accommodations, were left behind at Galway. They were expected to be returned to the United States aboard another vessel, possibly the liner Washington now en route to Bordeaux, France, to evacuate Americans there.

GENOA, Italy, June 3—Carrying 1,800 Americans hurrying home from European war zones, the United States liner Manhattan was en route to New York from Genoa.

Passengers packed the halls, salons and dining rooms of the liner, but several hundred were left behind for lack of space. Some will be picked up by the liner President Harrison which sails today and others are expected to be evacuated aboard the liner Exambion.

The recent Community Club meeting up at the Mrs. Pontius restaurant, was well attended, about thirty present. As a part of the program as splendid banquet was served. It was decided to make July 4, another "Ashville Bigger and Better" day. Some changes in the usual set program of former years, is being considered and in the making. Committees are at work "figgerin' out" that good time and fun day for everybody. Announcements later will tell it all.

Squire Elmer Malone who spent several days at the Veterans' Hospital, Chillicothe, returned home just in time to get in on hearing about some of the troubles they have up Northward, calling pet names and everything. While he didn't say exactly what he meant, said he thought that "brick house" up on 104 would be about the right place to send a few of those troublesome ones.

In the passing of Taylor Brintlinger, 72, and William Abbott, 84, Ashville has lost two of its well known and useful citizens. Both these saw the village in its beginning stage when but few dwellings were here—scarce by more than a dozen all told. Unless we have made a miscount, there are not more than a short dozen now here who are familiar with the old Ashville. These few at different times, when chancing to meet, have done all but set a definite date when a get-together meeting would be held to make and compare notes covering a period from about the middle seventies to the present time. The information these notes would contain if preserved will come in handy in 1950 when Ashville celebrates the one hundredth anniversary of its incorporation.

Local enrollment is being handled by Stanley Beckett, of the Beckett Motor Sales, Ford tractor dealer.

HEALTH OFFICE LISTS ACTIVITY FOR LAST MONTH

Three tuberculosis suspects were examined by the Pickaway County board of health during May, a monthly report from County Health Commissioner A. D. Blackburn's office revealed Monday. During the month, three skin tests were made, two sputum examinations and three chest x-rays. One death from tuberculosis was reported in Circleville while one patient was released from Ohio Sanatorium.

During the month, two school round-ups were made, one at Williamsport school and one at Washington Township school. Examinations and immunizations were made by the Dr. Blackburn and County Health Nurse Margaret H. Hunsicker.

At the Advisory Council meeting held May 6, Whitney Lamb was appointed a member of the County Board of Health for a period of five years.

Two cases of scarlet fever were reported during May, both in Jackson Township school. After both cases had been placed under quarantine, daily inspections were made at the school and several suspicious cases were taken out of the school and kept under observation for a few days.

Three suspected rabies cases were reported and investigations made and one inspection made of sanitary conditions on private premises.

Margaret Hunsicker, county health nurse, made 104 home visits during the month, attended 22 conferences and delivered 60 birth certificates.

It was decided to make July 4, another "Ashville Bigger and Better" day. Some changes in the usual set program of former years, is being considered and in the making. Committees are at work "figgerin' out" that good time and fun day for everybody. Announcements later will tell it all.

Squire Elmer Malone who spent several days at the Veterans' Hospital, Chillicothe, returned home just in time to get in on hearing about some of the troubles they have up Northward, calling pet names and everything. While he didn't say exactly what he meant, said he thought that "brick house" up on 104 would be about the right place to send a few of those troublesome ones.

In the passing of Taylor Brintlinger, 72, and William Abbott, 84, Ashville has lost two of its well known and useful citizens. Both these saw the village in its beginning stage when but few dwellings were here—scarce by more than a dozen all told. Unless we have made a miscount, there are not more than a short dozen now here who are familiar with the old Ashville. These few at different times, when chancing to meet, have done all but set a definite date when a get-together meeting would be held to make and compare notes covering a period from about the middle seventies to the present time. The information these notes would contain if preserved will come in handy in 1980 when Ashville celebrates the one hundredth anniversary of its incorporation.

The village council will be in session this Monday evening . . . The Schlegel ambulance returned Mrs. Mary Sark to her home here Sunday.

FORD PROVIDES YOUTH OF FARM CHANCE FOR STUDY

New opportunities for young men of the farm were revealed this week through the announcement of Henry Ford that at least 20,000 scholarships for the study of farm management and engineering are to be awarded by the National Farm Youth Foundation.

Young men enrolled under these scholarships will receive a special course for home study, as well as practical training on farms. They also will compete for salaried jobs.

Local enrollment is being handled by Stanley Beckett, of the Beckett Motor Sales, Ford tractor dealer.
